David E. Fraser

David E. Fraser currently serves as Chief of Staff to Supervisor Federal D. Glover. He has held that position since being appointed in Fall 2006. Concurrently, he holds an appointment as an Adjunct Professor in the Master of Public Administration program at California State University, East Bay. His primary teaching areas are Organizational Change, Public Management and Qualitative Research Methods. However, he has developed and teaches graduate courses in Supervision and Grant Research, Writing & Administration. He holds graduate degrees in Public & Business Administration and is a candidate for a Doctor of Education degree in leadership.

He is a highly sought after consultant and public presenter. He has presented throughout the United States and the Caribbean on multiple occasions. The City of Oakland is among the major municipalities that have sought his services in organizational and management development. He is also a principal guest lecturer at the Felix Austin Police training college where he teaches law enforcement leadership twice each year.

David served the City of Oakland as Chief Development Officer and Senior Intergovernmental Affairs Officer in the office of former City Manager, Robert Bobb. He has also served in senior management and executive roles in nonprofit organizations such as the New York Urban League and Volunteers of America.

He is an avid photo enthusiast who is always in pursuit of "that perfect photographic moment." While his preference is landscape and wildlife photography, he enjoys capturing people at "unusual times." Playing the piano adds to his artistic passions.
